i've been slowly but surely, slowly but surely building up the piece. it's been in the works for a few months now. the title "the last ronin" is a reference to the last turtle (leonardo), also, if you'd like to watch the trailer, click here. i'm putting in a lot of work, and i'm also incredibly ambitious. the fans should be thankful. one of my dreams is to have some of my work be in an official nickelodeon cartoon. that's not a joke or anything. but, it's not too early to start planning for such a dream. i'm going to be working on that for the next few years. i don't know how many years, but i'm willing to work hard for a decade to make that happen. but, i can't promise anything. i just have a vision and i want to live up to it. to my fans, i wish you all the best in your lives. and to my friends, i wish you all the best in everything you do! peer-to-peer networks are by their very nature public. if you upload a file to a torrent, anyone can download it. as a result, any of your private information might end up being downloaded by the public. while this information is not necessarily yours, you cannot be sure who else will see it, and might not realise that it is yours until after the fact. a virus or malware can infect your computer, blocking access to torrents and even downloading copyrighted files. by downloading copyrighted content, you are unwittingly encouraging malware to infect your computer. if your computer is already infected, then a torrent download could make it even worse. any action you take while connected to a bittorrent network can be tracked. a simple search for the name of a torrent you have downloaded and the tracker associated with it might reveal the location of your computer. this can be especially useful if you use your computer outside of your home, where your isp may not monitor your traffic. you might not realise that your isp knows where you are, and that you are doing something illegal. 5ec8ef588b
