CBfuser Packer is a lightweight application that enables you to compress a project into a single individual file in just 3 easy steps. After a quick installation, you are welcomed by a medium-sized window that is quite easy to understand even if you do not have extensive computer knowledge. The black-themed interface consists of the main window that displays the functions and overall role of the application. To be more precise, in the upper section you have the features that enable you to select the project folder and the output directory along with the executable file. In the lower region, the application includes a message log where you can view the selected files and folders are adequate for packing. Straightforward functionality, but it could use more options It is necessary to mention that you are unable to compress your project into a portable application unless you already build the executable for your project. Therefore, you should use another third-party software to design your initial project. You can create your portable application by specifying the source folder that contains all the files that you want to pack into a single executable. On a side note, it would be nice if the tool allowed you to select the file that you want to execute when you launch the executable manually. In addition, it would be useful if the program enables you to set rules such as overwrite files, skip certain files or ask for confirmations, for instance. A rudimentary tool for quick EXE files creation All in all, CBfuser Packer is a simple application that enables you to build executable files for your projects fast, easy and without having an extensive computer or programming know-how. Compatibility Notes: The spacebar is in the "non-working" position. In gameplay mode, while on map, the spacebar should be used to act as a pause command, instead of the default pressing the spacebar during gameplay, the game should pause after the default spacebar, it will then pause to allow the player to act on the pause command. The pause command is a toggle, meaning a single spacebar action will pause the game and a double spacebar action will resume gameplay. Toggling the pause command is bound to
